SECRET
DECLASSIFIED

William Albright (archaeologist, orientalist, and scholar), Lionel Trilling (English Professor at Columbia University), William Jackson (Librarian of the Houghton Library at Harvard), Pier Nervi (Italian architectural engineer), Herrman Blumgarth (Professor of Medicine at Harvard), Julian Schwinger (Harvard physicist), Sidney Robb (Boston merchandising executive and philanthropist), Hallstein, Martin, McNamara and myself.

I went this morning to see Audrey and Stephen Currier at their apartment, 1125 Fifth Avenue. I thought the three children, Andrea, Lavinia, and Michael, enchanting. They have a beguiling black and white King Charles spaniel named Bismarck.

Talked to more business people today.

June 16, 1962 - Saturday

Up at seven. Arrived at Idlewild well ahead of time, but the flight was postponed until noon. Pan American had the same dreary, pretentious menu, featuring Maxim's dishes, prepared 3000 miles from that restaurant.

Al Wells met me at the London airport. I got to Regents Park shortly after midnight.

[illegible] ON STATE A/GIS/IR
[illegible] REL DATE 6-17-81
IS AUTH. [illegible]
ENDORSE [illegible]
DECLASSIFIED [illegible]
RELEASE DENIED [illegible]
[illegible] EXEMPTIONS

June 17, 1962 - Sunday

We motored out this morning to the Duke of Bedford's place, Woburn. The park is, by many people, considered the finest private one in the world. Surrounded by a brick wall it has for generations been in effect a huge private zoo. There are more than 5,000 deer, American buffalo, European bison, Australian wallabi, other animals, and many varieties of swan, geese, etc. The house, stable, and out buildings match in immensity the park. The Duke is a great showman, and has all sorts of entertainments going on. In one day last year these attracted 45,000 visitors. Today there were thousands of people roaming around the grounds, and other thousands in the house. The charming Duchess, a French woman, took us on

DECLASSIFIED